Obesity, quite literally, is a growing problem all across the United States and it tends to affect our state more than others. It is a complex health issue that was recently deemed a disease. Behavioral, environmental, and genetic factors play a role and a multi-pronged approach to obesity is necessary so that healthy behaviors are the convenient, natural choice. Program faculty will demonstrate how healthy lifestyle changes and worksite initiatives can help reverse an expanding trend.

Program objectives:

- 1. Discuss obesity trends in Alabama and the United States.
- 2. Identify three chronic diseases associated with obesity.
- 3. Identify strategies to prevent or reduce obesity in the workplace.
- 4. List two local initiatives taking place in our state to address the burden of obesity.
